*Equality Act 2010

The Equality Act came into force in April, 2010 providing a modern, single legal framework with clear, streamlined law to more effectively tackle disadvantage and discrimination. The Equality Act was introduced to strengthen protection, advance equality and simplify the law. Its purpose is to eliminate discrimination, harassment and victimisation, advance equality of opportunity between people who share a characteristic and those who do not and foster good relations between people who share a characteristic and those who do not.

These characteristics, known as 'Protected Characteristics' are age, disability, gender reassignment, marriage and civil partnership, pregnancy and maternity, race, religion or belief, sex (man or woman) and sexual orientation.

It is essential that all staff at Southend United Football Club have a clear understanding of the following terms (as contained on the Equality and Human Rights glossary list):

Associate discrimination: Where a victim of discrimination does not have a protected characteristic, but, is discriminated against because of their association with someone who does, eg. The parent of a disabled child.

Direct discrimination: Less favourable treatment of a person compared with another person because of a protected characteristic.

Indirect discrimination: The use of an apparently neutral practice, provision or criterion which puts people with a particular protected characteristic at a disadvantage compared with others who do not share that characteristic.

Harassment: Unwanted behaviour that has the purpose or the effect of violating a person's dignity or creates a degrading, humiliating, hostile, intimidating or offensive environment.

Perceptive discrimination: The belief that someone has a protected characteristic, whether or not they do have it.

Positive action: Refers to a range of lawful actions that seek to overcome or minimise disadvantages (e.g. in employment opportunities) that people who share a protected characteristic have experienced, or to meet their different needs.

Positive discrimination: Treating someone with a protected characteristic more favourably to counteract the effects of past discrimination. It is generally not lawful although the duty to make reasonable adjustments is an exception where treating a disabled person more favourably may be required by law.

Victimisation: Subjecting a person to detriment because they have done a protected act or there is a belief that they have done a protected act i.e. bringing proceedings under the Act; giving evidence or information in connection with proceedings under the Act; doing any other thing for the purposes or in connection with the Act; making an allegation that a person has contravened the Act.
